Our journal has an established routine of reshuffling the editorial board after some years of duty. This volume thus marks the first one after Jesper Simonsen and Virpi Kristiina Tuunainen stepped down. We are grateful for their services and look forward to working with the newly recruited members, Karl Kautz and Matti Rossi.

An unfortunate side-effect of this change of guard, is the resulting gender imbalance. We are painfully aware of this and aim at amending it shortly, maybe already when Eric steps down this upcoming summer.

The current issue is a special issue on development and use of web-based information systems edited by Keld Bødker and Peter Carstensen. We know all too well that this involves a considerable amount of work and are very grateful for the effort. Thanks, Keld and Peter!
